Earthquake in the US: Liability for Physicians Who Help

The footage emerging from Haiti is heartbreaking. Many physicians have taken time from their private practices to help - in Haiti. Our educated guess is that there is virtually no liability for these magnanimous gestures. We paused to analyze whether doctors helping in a U.S. based catastrophe would meet a similar legal fate.

There are numerous laws affording immunity to different practitioners in different circumstances. The mosaic of laws is difficult to decipher. We tried...
